My name is Anggita Putri Chaerani, I'm 19 years old and currently studying law in Universitas Gadjah Mada, Yogyakarta-Indonesia. I have not done anything special to promote peace yet but I think that in my personal life I do a lot of things to achieve good relationships with the people that are around me. I would like to make a difference in the way that people treat each other because I want the younger generation to live in a better world, a world where there is no place for racism and discrimination and everyone are treated equally.

I think that there'll be peace in the world when each and every one of us tries to change his way of thinking and behavior in his daily-bases it starts with the smallest and "meaningless" things in life, therefore I try to start this process by respecting people who surround me.. I'm always excited if talk about peace, because of my idol, John Lennon. As we know, his name will always be synonymous with peace and political activism. His song "Give Peace a Chance" remains an anthem for the anti-war movement and probably always will. I do believe that world peace is possible, and it needs to start in the hearts and minds of all of us. To create a more peaceful world we need to be friendly with others, help other people to survive in their difficulties. If we want to have peace in our life, we have to start to live peaceful life and be example for other people. There are lots of people working toward peace in our world so let's join the effort, rather than question if it is possible or not, beside that I once heard that nothing is impossible.
