Please call me Rey, it's much easier to remember. I was born in Malang, Indonesia on the 6 April 1993. Right now, I'm studying International Relations in the Gadjah Mada University Yogyakarta, Indonesia.

Beside my activities as a university student, I'm also a part time translator at a private company, and sometimes a professional fire dance performer. I like martial arts, reading books, music, and movie. I love travelling, learning new cultures, and many things you will never imagine before. I'm a part of Indonesian Youth Network Towards Disaster Resilience and together with other members, we've organized a Charity Concert for Books Donation in Yogyakarta.

I've participated in YPA4 Hiroshima and LBD2 Sendai before. As a 20 year old youth, I've experienced disasters by myself. In 2010 Mount Merapi Eruption happened right in Yogyakarta. I really enjoyed being part of LBD because there I can learn a lot of things about disaster management that I've never seen before in my life. Some of them can be implemented to my country as well. This is very interesting, because both of Japan and Indonesia are very disaster-risky, but our preparedness of ours in Indonesia was so far behind compared with Japan.
